We all recognize the educational value of the internet. Some sites are extremely	mely informative and provide fast access to a variety of facts and opinions. This ma	akes
the internet a particularly effective tool for learning and for research. But pe	ople have started to talk about the internet as a replacement for the traditional me	edia.
Certainly, most newspaper editors have realized that they won't survive withou	ıt an internet version. People are just not satisfied with having to wait until a newsp	aper is published before they can read a news story. The internet can deliver as it happens. But what about entertainment? Can the internet replace the radio and TV? Well, already there are thousands of online radio stations. You can pick them up anywhere in the world. You don't have to be near a transmitter. And billions of videos are watched on You Tube simply because of the amazing number of things that you can find.

Answer the following questions:

How can the internet be entertaining?

Why is the internet an effective tool for learning?

What is the difference between papers and the internet?
